

FIGURE 3

Crystal clear water spills across Huka Falls (left) as it exits Lake Taupo and forms the Waikato River. The Waikato runs north through the heart of New Zealand's dairy country (right), and the dairy industry is often blamed for the sediment and nutrients added to the river.

